A LIFE for a life. . . The state of Ohio takes the life of Mrs. Anna Marie Hahn, Cincinnati, O., poisoner, leaving her son, Oscar, 12, who still repeats, "I don't think my mother did those things." Mrs. Hahn was electrocuted in the Ohio penitentiary for the poison death of an elderly German, the first woman in the history of the state to be electrocuted.

'BORGIA' CRIES FOR HER LIFE

Cincinnatian Becomes First Woman To Be Executed by Electricity in Ohio State Penitentiary

COLUMBUS, Dec. 8—(UP)—The body of Anna Hahn, who died in a fit of terror in the electric chair last night, was buried in a Catholic cemetery here today.

Mrs. Hahn's family resides in her native Germany and the only friends she made in her eight years in America are in Cincinnati, but at her death there was no relative or friend to claim her body or to arrange for her funeral.

Her attorneys, her matrons and Ohio penitentiary officials took the only interest in arranging her funeral. Her beloved, 12 year old son, Oscar, was not brought to the last rites.

Mrs. Hahn was convicted of murdering 78 year old Jacob Wagner in Cincinnati. Her trial lasted 26 days, her imprisonment in Ohio penitentiary 271 days. The state took her life in two minutes.

The electric current cut off the Lord's prayer on her lips. But before she prayed she collapsed and pleaded for those in the little death chamber for mercy. It was not within their power to help her.

The public was allowed to view Mrs. Hahn's body at the O'Shaughnessy funeral home this morning. About 100 persons walked past her bier.

She was dressed in a white palm beach suit, white knitted silk blouse. Her flowing corn-colored hair had been marcelled since her execution.

One large basket of flowers arrived just before the service. It bore a card: "with deepest sympathy — from friends in Cincinnati." It could not be learned who sent the flowers. They were tea roses, chrysanthemums and gladioli.

The Catholic service was private. Father John A. Sullivan, prison chaplain who was Mrs. Hahn's confessor in her last moments, conducted the brief service.

Those who attended included her attorneys, Joseph Hoodin, Sidney Brant and Sidney Kahn; Mrs. James C. Woodard, wife of the prison warden; the three matrons who walked with her to the chair, Mrs. Josie O'Bleness, Mrs. Esther Lyle and Mrs. Rene Tipple; a former matron and a few friends of the matrons.

The body was taken to Mt. Calvary cemetery.

Mrs. Hahn's son was at the home of one of her attorneys, Hiram C. Bolsinger, sr., in Cincinnati today. Oscar was to be given a rest. He last saw his mother three hours before her death.

To Talk of Future

"Hoodin and I will talk with relatives later today as to Oscar's future," Bolsinger said. "In the meantime, we thought it better to keep him in seclusion."

Bolsinger said Mrs. Hahn left no will.

Certainly Mrs. Hahn was not protesting her innocence when the warden and three matrons brought her into the death chamber of the Ohio state penitentiary at 8 o'clock last night. Illogically, irrationally, she was pleading for her life with persons who could not grant it, crying out for mercy to persons who had no authority to be merciful.

CALIFORNIAN, 21, ADMITS KNIFING CO-ED TO DEATH

BERKELEY, Cal., Dec. 8—(UP)

Rodney Grieg, 21, confessed today that he stabbed blonde Leona Vlught, 19, to death with a hunting knife on a lonely "lover's lane."

He said he stabbed her "for no reason at all." Then he smoked six cigarettes and watched her die. After a chance meeting with the girl on a downtown street, Grieg said they drove to the isolated spot. The girl felt "low" and talked of committing suicide, Grieg said.

He said he handed her his hunting knife.

"She made a few playful passes at me with it," he said. "I took it away from her. We sat and talked for several minutes and I was toying with the knife when all of sudden for no reason at all I plunged it into her breast."

"I smoked six cigarettes while she died."

Authorities, however, believe that Grieg stabbed Miss Vlught, a University of California co-ed, when she resisted him.

The fire broke out about 7 p. m. in the 16-room stone house, operated by Mrs. Bertha Kern. The victims were trapped on the second and third floors. Firemen smashed windows and carried them unconscious, down ladders.

Two fire alarms were sounded. Twenty policemen and five ambulances were summoned.

Mrs. Kern, who was in her office on the first floor, and two employees in the kitchen discovered the fire simultaneously. Raymond Devereaux, 22, and Mrs. Bertha Rendig, 38, were in the kitchen washing dishes when they smelled smoke.

Devereaux tried to get into the basement but was driven back by smoke and flames. Mrs. Kern ran to the corner and turned in the fire alarm.

The flames and dense smoke in a few moments prevented the aged persons from escaping down the stairway.

Red, Blue Ink Thrown On Italian Consulate By Angry Students

TUNIS, Dec. 8—(UP)—French mounted police were called out today to curb several hundred French students who marched towards the Italian business section shouting "Long Live French Tunisia! Down With Fascism!"

The demonstration lasted for an hour, after which police dispersed the students.

An hour later, 14 French bombers circled the city.

Today's demonstration was the fourth in five days.

The first outbreak occurred on Sunday, when windows of Italian offices were smashed. The second was on Tuesday, when French and Italian students had fist fights and stoned one another. On Wednesday railroad and highway workers threw ink on the walls of the Italian consulate.

Arabs to Demonstrate

This afternoon Arabs planned a demonstration in favor of "Tunisia for the French" in connection with the arrival of the Bey of Tunisia in the capital from the South.

Reports from the Tunisian-Libyan border said that the frontier zones were closed to all civilians and that Marshal Italo Balbo, governor general of Libya, had completed extensive troop movements.

Balbo, it was said, had heavily reinforced Nauli, Sinauet and Gadames, Italy's westernmost outposts of Tripolitania opposite the French defense lines in the Grand-Erg desert.

Nearly 250,000 Italian and French troops, it was estimated, now face each other across the desert border, backed for a hundred miles on each side by the most modern war equipment produced in European arsenals.

At the southernmost tip of Tunisia, the French have reinforced Fort Saint, just across the border from Gadamess, while in the North, colonial troops and soldiers of the Foreign Legion fully man all strongholds of the new French "Magnet" line based on Gabes, from where motor roads run to all sectors of the frontier, enabling swift and easy movement of troops, tanks and artillery.

DIETRICH SAYS SCHOOL CRISIS OVER IN STATE

All To Remain Open For Remainder Of Year, Claims Educator

FUNDS UP TO NEW SOLONS

Necessity For Enactment Of Cigaret, Liquid Fuel Taxes Seen

COLUMBUS, Dec. 8.—Director of Education E. N. Dietrich today said that Ohio's school crisis is over.

"All Ohio schools will be open for the remainder of the year," Mr. Dietrich said. "In many districts there are financial worries for boards of education, but the certification of the last quarter's payments of the School Foundation Fund has pushed the crisis ahead to 1939 when it becomes a legislative rather than a financial problem."

Mr. Dietrich said that "the very critical conditions such as those in Parma and Dayton have been solved temporarily by borrowing in anticipation of tax receipts."

"The financial difficulties of the schools are now a matter for legislative consideration," Mr. Dietrich said. "The School Foundation Fund will be some $17,000,000 short of its commitments for 1939. That is, certification of the payment of funds has been issued for $17,000,000 more than the department will receive for 1938."

Up to New Solons
The incoming legislature will have to cope with this problem in addition to financing school operations for the 1939-40 biennium."

Mr. Dietrich added that he thought it would be necessary to re-enact the cigarette and liquid fuel taxes, and that he thought it would be wise to give the schools a direct, definite appropriation from sales tax receipts instead of a percentage of the tax such as the law now provides.

He pointed out that the financial troubles of Ohio Schools school system were due in a very large measure to a decline in sales tax receipts during 1938, when the school received 60 percent of sales tax returns after deductions for Administration costs and direct appropriations for relief.

Mr. Dietrich said that borrowing against certifications had solved the immediate problem for many of the school districts, which would have faced fund shortages otherwise.

Old Well Holds Gasoline

UKIAH, Cal. (UP)—Probably the world's only gasoline well has been discovered here. Workers razing an old service station came upon a walled water well which contained about 100 gallons of gasoline. It had presumably leaked from the pumps and was preserved in the airtight condition of the well.

Use of Hybrid Adapted Locally Urged by Beard

COLUMBUS Dec. 8.—Although 60 percent of Ohio's 1939 corn crop will be grown from hybrid seed, that is no proof that every hybrid is suitable for planting on every Ohio farm, according to D. F. Beard, agronomy department, Ohio State university, who says an unadapted hybrid may be less productive than the farmer's own open-pollinated corn.

Farmers do not have to guess which hybrids are suited to their section of the state. Both the university and the Ohio Experiment Station test new hybrids each year to compare them with established hybrids and with the better open-pollinated corn varieties. The tests are made in different sections of the state to make sure how the hybrid will succeed under varying conditions of soil and weather.

From these tests a list of hybrids recommended for planting in Ohio is made each year. All county agricultural agents have the names of the hybrids suitable for use in their counties, and these hybrids include the survivors from all those which have shown some promise of usefulness within the state.

Adapted hybrids will pay for the increased cost of seed with higher yields and with lower harvesting costs, but unadapted hybrids may yield fewer bushels per acre than the old open-pollinated varieties usually grown on the farm. Hybrids should be bought by name and number from the check list for Ohio.

Ohio producers of hybrid seed have an association which certifies seed which is produced under certain stringent regulations to insure its purity. They have a scale of seed prices which can be used to compare with prices quoted by other sources which produce seed of comparable quality.

Mr. Beard also reminds farmers that hybrid seed usually is graded so the kernels are of approximately the same size and shape. Planter plates adapted to one size of seed may not work equally well with others. The should be checked for accuracy in planting hybrids before actual seeding time.

Hybrid seed should be checked for germination before planting; and if the germination test is unsatisfactory, there will be time for adjustments with the seller. Hybrid seed, like any other seed corn, should be stored in a cool, dry place. Placing it behind the stove is liable to injure its germination.

LAW FOR MILK DISTRIBUTION BEING WRITTEN

An ordinance establishing regulations for the sale of milk and milk products in the city will probably be ready for the next meeting of council.

Councilmen were informed that a representative of the state department of health, assisting in the preparation of an ordinance, would be in the city next Monday.

BORDER CLOSED BETWEEN LIBYA, FRENCH TUNISIA

250,000 Troops Face Each Other As Crisis Becomes More Acute

Silimban announced today that he would protest to French authorities against anti-Italian demonstrations and would give notice that unless the demonstrations ceased Italians living in Tunis would put themselves in "a state of legitimate defense."

Silimban decided to protest after a new outbreak last night during which 1,000 French railroad workers and a scattering of Arabs marched to the Italian consulate general and threw bottle of red and blue ink at its white walls, so as to mark it with the French Red, white and blue colors.

One bottle went through a window, the consul general said, and smeared a picture of King Victor Emmanuel.

Consul General Silimban had just returned to Tunis from Rome, where he conferred with Count Galeazzo Ciano, foreign minister, on the position of Italy regarding Tunis.

In their demonstration last night, the railroad workers and the Arabs sang the Marseillaise, the French National Anthem, as they marched on the consulate general. Riot squads of French police were called out. They dispersed the demonstrators as Italians milled about, booing and catcalling the Marseillaise. Despite the angry situation there was only an exchange of fistcluffs among a few persons in the crowd.

Earlier yesterday, French and Italian school children had engaged in fist fights on their way to and from school, and had bombarded each other with stones.

chamber heard her, was a faint sobbing in the corridor outside, then the door was opened and she was there, between two matrons, and behind her were the tense, drawn faces of her confessor, Father John Sullivan, and the warden, James C. Woodard.

Dressed in blue pajamas and a flowered brown smock which reached a little above her knees, she had little of the youthful appeal which had charmed the four old men whom she poisoned for their money. Her face was ashen and every muscle was drawn taut. Her blonde hair was stringy. She looked many years older than her 32 years.

Collapsed To Floor

She took one step into the room, toward the chair, then collapsed in a heap on the floor. The three matrons, the warden, and a guard picked her up, carried her 10 feet, and put her down in the chair, for a second she sat tense, her eyes closed, while the straps were being tightened around her arms and electrodes were being clamped to her leg and head.

"Don't do this to me," she cried. Her voice trailed off into moans, then rose again in frenzy: "Don't... Don't... Don't."

The straps were drawn tighter and she writhed. "Ow! please don't... my boy!... think of my boy. Can't you help me?"

She appeared very feminine writhing there in the chair, her alto voice tragic and feminine in its appeal. She and the three matrons were the only women in the room. The rest were men and her appeal to them was elemental. Her wild eyes jumped from face to face.

"Won't anyone help me?" she cried.

An instant of utter silence. "Anybody... anybody... anybody." Her voice rose with each syllable until it was shrieking. "Isn't there anyone who can help me?"

At that point her eyes fell on Warden Woodard.

"Warden! Don't let them do this to me."

"I'm sorry, Mrs. Hahn. There is nothing I can do."

Next she saw Father Sullivan.

"Oh, Father, come close to me."

"Yes," said the priest, stepping forward.

"Oh, Father, Father," she begged, then, suddenly practical: "Don't come too close, Father. You'll be killed."

Not Touching Her

He was not touching her and there was no danger of the current that was to pass through her body, killing him. He said at once:

"Our Father who art in Heaven."

In a wailing voice, she repeated: "Our Father Who art in Heaven."

"Hallowed be Thy name," said the priest.

As she repeated, the death mask was tied over her face.

"Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done."

She repeated, her voice noticeably calmer.

The warden had his finger on an electric push button. His hand tightened as he pushed it. It lighted a light in another room and caused three guards to close three electric switches. One of the switches sent an electrical current pouring through her body, sealing her lips at the word "us" in "deliver us from evil."

A minute later, she was pronounced dead and the witnesses filed out, many of them the worse for what they had seen and heard.

Mrs. Hahn's attorneys, who fought for over a year to save her from execution, planned to do something for her 12 year old son, Oscar, just what they didn't know.

They brought him to Columbus from Cincinnati, where he lives with his stepfather's family, during the last week of her life and attempted to get him in to Gov. Martin L. Davey so that he might ask the governor for his mother's life as "a Christmas present."

Davey, having decided that he would not be justified in commuting her sentence to life imprisonment, wouldn't see him.

Oscar saw his mother for the last time late yesterday afternoon. The matrons were waiting to dress her for the chair and they cut off the interview after 20 minutes.

Mrs. Hahn was nearly prostrate and young Oscar was ashen-faced, red-eyed when he came out, carrying his mother's fur coat. She told him she wouldn't need it any more and he could have it.

Attorney H. C. Bolsinger took him to a hotel and stayed with him until it was over, talking to him about model airplanes, his hobby, his early years, anything except about his mother. At 6:30 p. m. he took him to the hotel dining room and Oscar was eating heartily until he heard newsboys shouting in the street outside. One, with a particularly strident voice, was screaming: "Anna Must Burn." The papers were announcing that Federal Court Judge Mel G. Underwood had rejected her plea for a writ of habeas corpus, her last possibility of escape.

The child's face went white and his lower lip trembled. He suggested that maybe he could see his mother again. Bolsinger drove him out to the prison and on the way persuaded him that it might be best if he didn't see her.

When they were in the prison yard, Oscar decided he was right and said he understood. Father Sullivan saw the child there and took him into the prison chapel where they knelt side by side before the altar and prayed for his mother's soul. As he left the prison his eyes were on the windows of his mother's cell on the second floor of the chapel building. The shades were drawn. A half hour later his mother was on her way to death.

She was convicted of poisoning 78 year old Jacob Wagner who had taken her into his home as a nurse. She was arrested in Colorado Springs, Colo., in 1937 for larceny, having disposed of some of Wagner's property immediately after his death. The investigation immediately established that she had made a business of "making herself attractive" to aged men in Cincinnati and the state charged that in addition to Wagner she had poisoned George Obendorfer, 67, George Gsellman, 67, and an old man named Palmer, for their money.

Born in Germany, she came to this country after Oscar's birth out of wedlock. Later she married Hahn who had left her before she became involved in swindling old men.

She was the first woman ever electrocuted in Ohio and the first woman executed in this state since 1840.

BORDER CLOSED BETWEEN LIBYA, FRENCH TUNISIA

250,000 Troops Face Each Other As Crisis Becomes More Acute

(Continued from Page One) Silimani announced today that he would protest to French authorities against anti-Italian demonstrations and would give notice that unless the demonstrations ceased Italians living in Tunis would put themselves in "a state of legitimate defense."

Silimani decided to protest after a new outbreak last night during which 1,000 French railroad workers and a scattering of Arabs marched to the Italian consulate general and threw bottles of red and blue ink at its white walls, so as to mark it with the French Red, white and blue colors.

One bottle went through a window, the consul general said, and smeared a picture of King Victor Emmanuel.

Consul General Silimani had just returned to Tunis from Rome, where he conferred with Count Galeazzo Ciano, foreign minister, on the position of Italy regarding Tunis.

In their demonstration last night, the railroad workers and the Arabs sang the Marseillaise, the French National Anthem, as they marched on the consulate general. Riot squads of French police were called out. They dispersed the demonstrators as Italians milled about, booing and catcalling the Marseillaise. Despite the angry situation there was only an exchange of fistcluffs among a few persons in the crowd.

Earlier yesterday, French and Italian school children had engaged in fist fights on their way to and from school, and had bombarded each other with stones.

"Hallowed be Thy name," said the priest.

As she repeated, the death mask was over her face.

"Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done."

She repeated, her voice noticeably calmer.

The warden had his finger on an electric push button. His hand tightened as he pushed it. It lighted a light in another room and caused three guards to close three electric switches. One of the switches sent an electrical current pouring through her body, sealing her lips at the word "us" in "deliver us from evil."

A minute later, she was pronounced dead and the witnesses filed out, many of them the worse for what they had seen and heard.

Mrs. Hahn's attorneys, who fought for over a year to save her from execution, planned to do something for her 12 year old son, Oscar, just what they didn't know.

They brought him to Columbus from Cincinnati, where he lives with his stepfather's family, during the last week of her life and attempted to get him in to Gov. Martin L. Davey so that he might ask the governor for his mother's life as "a Christmas present."

Davey, having decided that he would not be justified in commuting her sentence to life imprisonment, wouldn't see him.

Oscar saw his mother for the last time late yesterday afternoon. The matrons were waiting to dress her for the chair and they cut off the interview after 20 minutes.

Mrs. Hahn was nearly prostrate and young Oscar was ashen-faced, red-eyed when he came out, carrying his mother's fur coat. She told him she wouldn't need it any more and he could have it.

Attorney H. C. Bolsinger took him to a hotel and stayed with him until it was over, talking to him about model airplanes, his hobby, his early years, anything except about his mother. At 6:30 p. m. he took him to the hotel dining room and Oscar was eating heartily until he heard newshoys shouting in the street outside. One, with a particularly strident voice, was screaming: "Anna Must Burn." The papers were announcing that Federal Court Judge Mell G. Underwood had rejected her plea for a writ of habeas corpus, her last possibility of escape.

The child's face went white and his lower lip trembled. He suggested that maybe he could see his mother again. Bolsinger drove him out to the prison and on the way persuaded him that it might be best if he didn't see her.

When they were in the prison yard, Oscar decided he was right and said he understood. Father Sullivan saw the child there and took him into the prison chapel where they knelt side by side before the altar and prayed for his mother's soul. As he left the prison his eyes were on the windows of his mother's cell on the second floor of the chapel building. The shades were drawn. A half hour later his mother was on her way to death.

She was convicted of poisoning 78 year old Jacob Wagner who had taken her into his home as a nurse. She was arrested in Colorado Springs, Colo., in 1937 for larceny, having disposed of some of Wagner's property immediately after his death. The investigation immediately established that she had made a business of "making herself attractive" to aged men in Cincinnati and the state charged that in addition to Wagner she had poisoned George Obendorfer, 67, George Gsellman, 67, and an old man named Palmer, for their money.

Born in Germany, she came to this country after Oscar's birth out of wedlock. Later she married Hahn who had left her before she became involved in swindling old men.

She was the first woman ever electrocuted in Ohio and the first woman executed in this state since 1840.

JOYS OF SLAVERY

SPEAKING in Reichenberg last week to Sudeten Germans, Adolf Hitler surpassed himself in depicting the satisfactions which come to those who surrender their liberties. He described in glowing terms the blessedness of the youth organizations set up by the Nazi government, and rejoiced that the young Germans enrolled in them "will never be free in their whole lives."

"And are they happy about it?" he continued. "All the ridiculous prejudices about which their fathers may still feel sorry slowly disappear from their vision. They see everything in a different light."

It is hard for our young Americans, including millions of German descent, to understand that kind of joy. The young people we know don't talk much about liberty any more than they do about breathing, because it is so natural to them that they are hardly conscious of it. But just try some scheme to set any of these boys or girls "free from liberty", as a Nazi leader expresses it and see how quickly they will boil over!

Can the young people in Germany today be so very different? Are they really in love with a tyranny that slowly enfolds their whole lives and stifles the freedom of soul that is every human being's birthright?

CAVE COLLEGES

THE destruction of colleges and universities in eastern China by the Japanese armies has driven students on a long trek. Large numbers of them are now studying in poorly equipped colleges in western China. It is a sort of intellectual pioneering, with plain living and high thinking. Out of those pitiful, improvised temples of learning may come future leaders of the Chinese nation.

There are other colleges of a different kind—the "cave colleges" in Yenan and Shensi provinces, in the Northwest, which have become the West Points of the new Chinese army. There are said to be nearly 10,000 students there, wearing crude military uniforms, living in caves and eating "coolie food" of the cheapest and coarsest kind, while they learn the rudiments of the art of war to use against the invaders.

JOE KENNEDY RETURNING
WASHINGTON—Despite his statements to the contrary, official business is not the reason why Ambassador Joe Kennedy is popping back home for a few weeks. He was not asked to come.

As a matter of fact, at the moment Joe is not in the best standing in the inner circle. The trip is entirely his own idea. Two motives are behind it—politics and the press.

Personable, ingratiating, and with the flair of the Irish for politics, Joe is very ambitious in this direction. He is a brilliant business man and stock market operator, but he had made his pile and now wants to carve a name for himself in public affairs. What he is secretly after is the 1940 nomination for Vice President.

So, too, are Jim Farley, Senator Alben Barkley of Kentucky, and a dozen other hopefuls. Joe knows this, of course, so he is using the disturbed European situation as an excuse to dash across the Atlantic for a few weeks to look over the lay of the land and do some quiet fence building.

One of the chief things he wants to build up is his press. Joe has had a number of jolts lately. Reports from London have pictured him as taken into camp by the Chamberlain government and as an ardent supporter of its policy of "appeasing" the Nazis and Mussolini.

One American correspondent quoted Joe as complaining, "I wish Roosevelt had as much confidence in me as Neville Chamberlain."

Joe is not used to such critical comments. On personal terms with scores of newsmen, he is accustomed to friendly press treatment. The recent barrage of brickbats has greatly disturbed him. They could scuttle his vice presidential aspirations just as completely as his friend Chamberlain sank the trusting Czechs.

When Congress directed the Federal Trade Commission to investigate the retailing of automobiles, it did not know that FTC would find any pay dirt at its very doorstep.

In Washington, a group of retailers impose penalties on their salesmen if a car is sold for cash.

The high financing rates paid by a customer who buys a car "on time" are much more attractive to the dealer than the straight commission. So if a salesman sells a car on credit, his commission is as high as $50, but if he sells for cash, his fee is cut to $30.

This system means more profit for the dealer, but it also means that the buyer is induced to pay an interest rate which looks like 6 percent but is actually twice that much. It also means that other financing institutions, such as banks, lose business.

Rest Cure Is Best For Neurasthenics
By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

ACCORDING to the medical science of 50 years ago, neurasthenia was a condition of nerve exhaustion. That, of course, is exactly what the name means—asthenia of the nervous system. According to modern psychology, so simple a conception can no longer be held.

The trouble with the conception is that while the neurasthenic is always tired, he never does anything which really causes fatigue.

The amount of damage that fatigue can do differs with the different periods of life. In middle age, when the capacity for recuperation from fatigue slackens, when people become aware too late that they have lost the resilience of youth, neurasthenia may justly be said to be caused by overwork. In everyday speech, "It is worry, not work, that causes the breakdown." More often it is emotional tension that produces fatigue. You often hear that somebody "worked himself into a nervous breakdown", but it is probable that simple work does not operate in this way.

Personality and Fatigue

Personality also has a great deal to do with the ability to endure fatigue. A study of the lives of great creative geniuses would indicate that many of them suffered torments of neurasthenia as the result, not of the labor of writing words on paper at a desk or of executing combinations of sounds on a musical instrument, but of the tremendous expenditure of emotional activity that goes with creative work. Few people can work at so high a tension. The average man has not a sufficiently sensitive mind to bring on a nervous breakdown from this reason. Whatever the cause or the nature, the neurasthenic is always tired; he is always below par; he always complains somewhat of some part of his body. He is a typical ghost at the feast, the "sourpuss."

I am describing here the chronic, life-long neurasthenic, and most of them have the condition throughout their lives. There are many instances, however, of acute nervous breakdown from emotional or physical cause and these are subject to successful treatment.

Mitchell's Rest Cure

In spite of many psychotherapeutic methods, such as psycho-analysis, perhaps the best method of treatment for neurasthenics is the old one of Weir Mitchell, the rest cure. There are three cardinal features of the Weir Mitchell cure—(1) rest, (2) isolation, (3) overfeeding. The cure is known in America as "the rest cure", in France as "the isolation cure", and in England as "the overfeeding cure", each nation emphasizing the feature felt to be paramount.

There are certain other elements in the cure, such as massage and other forms of physiotherapy, but the really important elements are to allow the patient to rest and for the soul to right itself and become once more sweet and healthy. Of course, in this the role of the physician himself is extremely important. Weir Mitchell himself was a wonderful director, counselor and guide. He knew that the human heart is "deceitful", above all things "desperately wicked", but knew also that it might be attuned to devotion and loyalty, to the finest and most delicate sympathies.

CHAPTER 40
THE BIG International ball was being all the success that Houston's society editors had predicted. "Everybody" was there. Not literally, because the University club could hold less than a thousand people, and many couples had applied for tickets too late. But the elite were there. And the elite had paid $10 per couple, which is enough to insure excellent music, floor show, refreshments and trimmings.

Refreshments started early in the evening, when a picturesque Mexican peon drove a burro cart into the hall and began dispensing drinks and tidbits.

"Aquamiel, dulces Mexicanas, pecan candee-e-es!" he chanted. He pretended to beat on his bawky burro, which was two boys in clever costume. Dancers crowded around to sample his delicious punch and his candy.

Later some costumed Mexican women came solidly to the center of the dance floor, spread a great tarpaulin, and from earthen crocks which they had carried took steaming hot tamales. They were dainty tamale of white chicken meat. Tostados—crusty toasted tortillas—were served them. Guests ate with their fingers only, and amid much comment and laughter.

A live pig, once white but dyed green, with a red and yellow ribbon around its neck, darted across the floor during one dance. Shrieks and yells stopped the dance, and a bow-legged Mexican clown dashed in to catch his pig. With much grunting and pantomime, ten minutes of hilarity ensued.

Such surprises as these popped one after the other. Then, to everybody's delight, the president of the United States, and the president of Mexico, addressed the assembly for three minutes each, not in telegrams as first planned, but over long distance telephone, their voices being amplified in the ballroom. "My friends in Texas," Mr. Roosevelt concluded, "when two great nations can play together it is a significant thing. To the two universities who have met in clean sport and clean fellowship today, and especially to the citizens of our sister Republic to the south, greetings and good wishes all."

Master Worthington Gurley, freshman, had been checking in hats and coats earlier in the evening, but he managed to keep tab on some of the ballroom fun, too. He sensed that this was a grand ball, grandest he had ever seen. He liked the surprises, the stunts.

He had quickly concluded, therefore, that whatever Peaches Pome-roy had in mind would be another stunt of some sort, probably a hazing stunt. She had wanted to get rid of him temporarily. But he thought maybe the fun with the coats would start when he was gone, and he didn't want to miss one bit of it.

So he took her 50 cents and pretended to leave—but actually he just ducked around the hall corner and crawled down under the shadow of some potted palms.

He moved silently back to within ten feet of Peaches, where he had a full view of the checking counter and of the hats and wraps within, and he crouched there in the semidarkness to see what Peaches would do.

Was she going to start switching the checks ahead of the sophomores? He didn't know, but he would dog-gone sure see! Worthington snickered, silently.

Somebody was singing again in the ballroom.

"Tonight I'm the gay caballero, Out for much pleasure—Ha ha!"

It was the "Fiesta Song" that Don Romero had introduced. It had a catchy swing. A gay Mexican tune. Don Romero had sung it three times, and the orchestra had picked up the melody. Pretty soon everybody seemed to have the words memorized, of the chorus, at least.

"I'll catch me a girl, And give her a whiff, Of woooope a la Espanol!"

When they got to the "Ha-ha, ha-ha, HEY!" part, the crowd all shouted. It was better than "El Rancho Grande", Worthington reflected; better than the cowboy songs where you shriek "Yip-pee-ee!" in the choruses.

He peered at Peaches.

She had a wild look in her eyes. Not the twinkle of mischief one would expect, if fun were afoot. She looked frightened. And meant, actually mean.

"Gosh!" breathed Freshman Gurley, curiosity mounting.

Peaches went quietly to each end of the short hall, peered around the corners. Apparently no one was near. Then all at once she hastened back and went around behind the checking counter. She was moving swiftly now.

"She's starting something!" Worthington whispered to himself. He grinned in anticipation and raised up to watch her better.

He thought maybe she might steal a bunch of the coats and hide them somewhere in the building. That would be fun, all right. But then he remembered that Peaches had looked wild, and mean. The thought confused him.

He saw her rummage hastily in the rack where the girls' coats hung.

She seemed to be looking for a specific one—yes, sir, she was—she took down a white coat, one of transparent velvet with a touch of white fur, a nice but not very expensive coat. Why—that was Sara Sue's!

He knew positively. He had chatted with Sara Sue a moment when she came in, and helped her take the coat off while T. J. Sanders was removing his own. Moreover, he had hung up Sara Sue's with especial care. He liked Sara Sue. He would be eternally grateful to her for favors rendered.

Whatever could Peaches Pome-roy be conniving?

Worthington remembered, all in a rush, that Peaches was a heel. She was snobbish. She had been Bob Towne's big moment last year, people said, and now Bob was crazy about Sara Sue Davis. He, himself, had heard Peaches make cat-in-the-hat remarks, once or twice, about that. Now she had Sara Sue's coat—gosh!

To his amazement, Peaches began tearing at the lining of Sara Sue's coat.

On the side, near the hem, she was opening a seam, tearing at it with her fingers and her finger nails, and finally using her teeth to break the threads. And she was working very fast, almost frantically, keeping a sharp lookout. Worthington, highly curious, felt miserably lest she discover him in the shadows. A sense of alarm had suffused him.

Voices passing up the hall suddenly alarmed Peaches. Instantly she dropped the coat on a chair, forced a nice smile, and sauntered to the counter. She leaned over, looked left and right. Seeing no one, she was reassured. Her smile vanished. In a flash she was back at her task, working fast and warily. She reminded Worthington of a bird eating. A bird will spend one second picking up grass seed, then spend four seconds glancing cautiously around. In a half minute, though, she had the seam open—it appeared to be a slit three inches or so long—and she dropped the coat.

Then, surprisingly, Peaches reached for the diamond bracelet on her left arm.

It, too, offered some difficulty. Being extremely valuable (several thousand dollars, Worthington had heard) it had a positive safety catch on it. Peaches had to take her teeth to that, too. She gnawed, and twisted, and pulled, to get it free.

She pushed the pretty thing through the slit in Sara Sue's coat. Then she closed up the slit, making it as unobtrusive as she could. She hung the coat quickly on the rack where she had found it, took a deep breath, smiled again and calmly sauntered back outside to the front of the checking counter. She leaned one elbow indolently on it, as if waiting. Then she seemed to change her mind, for she walked down the hall and disappeared in the big ballroom.

"Gos-s-s-sh!" murmured Freshman Gurley, utterly appalled.

JOYS OF SLAVERY

SPEAKING in Reichenberg last week to Sudeten Germans, Adolf Hitler surpassed himself in depicting the satisfactions which come to those who surrender their liberties. He described in glowing terms the blessedness of the youth organizations set up by the Nazi government, and rejoiced that the young Germans enrolled in them "will never be free in their whole lives."

"And are they happy about it?" he continued. "All the ridiculous prejudices about which their fathers may still feel sorry slowly disappear from their vision. They see everything in a different light."

It is hard for our young Americans, including millions of German descent, to understand that kind of joy. The young people we know don't talk much about liberty any more than they do about breathing, because it is so natural to them that they are hardly conscious of it. But just try some scheme to set any of these boys or girls "free from liberty", as a Nazi leader expresses it and see how quickly they will boil over!

Can the young people in Germany today be so very different? Are they really in love with a tyranny that slowly enfolds their whole lives and stifles the freedom of soul that is every human being's birthright?

CAVE COLLEGES

THE destruction of colleges and universities in eastern China by the Japanese armies has driven students on a long trek. Large numbers of them are now studying in poorly equipped colleges in western China. It is a sort of intellectual pioneering, with plain living and high thinking. There are other colleges of a different kind—the "cave colleges" in Yenan and Shensi provinces, in the Northwest, which have become the West Points of the new Chinese army. Then, to everybody's delight, the president of the United States, and the president of Mexico, addressed the assembly for three minutes each, not in telegrams as first planned, but over long distance telephone, their voices being amplified in the ballroom. "My friends in Texas," Mr. Roosevelt concluded, "when two great nations can play together it is a significant thing. To the two universities who have met in clean sport and clean fellowship today, and especially to the citizens of our sister Republic to the south, greetings and good wishes all."

Mister Worthington Gurley, freshman, had been checking in hats and coats earlier in the evening, but he managed to keep tab on some of the ballroom fun, too. He sensed that this was a grand ball, grandest he had ever seen. He liked the surprise, the stunts.

He had quickly concluded, therefore, that whatever Peaches Pomeroy had in mind would be another stunt of some sort, probably a hazing stunt. She had wanted to get rid of him temporarily. But he thought maybe the fun with the coats would start when he was gone, and he didn't want to miss one bit of it.

So he took her 50 cents and pretended to leave—but actually he just ducked around the hall corner and crawled down under the shadow of some potted palms.

He moved silently back to within ten feet of Peaches, where he had a full view of the checking counter and of the hats and wraps within, and he crouched there in the semi-darkness to see what Peaches would do.

Was she going to start switching the checks ahead of the sophomores? He didn't know, but he would dog-gone sure see! Worthington snickered, silently.

Somebody was singing again in the big ballroom.

"Tonight I'm the gay caballero, Out for much pleasure—Ha ha!" It was the "Fiesta Song" that Don Romero had introduced. It had a catchy swing. A gay Mexican tune. Don Romero had sung it three times, and the orchestra had picked up the melody. Pretty soon everybody seemed to have the

Hints on Etiquette

In this day of informality, if a young man meets a girl he admires, he may ask her if he may call on her. Or she may ask him to call at her home at a certain definite time.

words memorized, of the chorus, at least.

"I'll catch me a girl, And give her a whirl, Of whoopee a la Espanol—"

When they got to the "Ha-ha, ha-ha, HEY!" part, the crowd all shouted. It was better than "El Rancho Grande". Worthington reacted; better than the cowboy songs, where you shriek "Yip-pee-ee!" in the choruses.

He peered at Peaches.

She had a wild look in her eyes. Not the twinkle of mischief one would expect, if fun were afoot.

She looked frightened. And mean, actually mean.

"Gosh!" breathed Freshman Gurley, curiosity mounting.

Peaches went quietly to each end of the short hall, peered around the corners. Apparently no one was near. Then all at once she hastened back and went around behind the checking counter. She was moving swiftly now.

"She's starting something!" Worthington whispered to himself. He grinned in anticipation and raised up to watch her better.

He thought maybe she might steal a bunch of the coats and hide them somewhere in the building. That would be fun, all right. But then he remembered that Peaches had looked wild, and mean. The thought confused him.

He saw her rummage hastily in the rack where the girls' coats hung.

She seemed to be looking for a specific one—yes, sir, she was—she took down a white coat, one of transparent velvet with a touch of white fur, a nice but not very expensive coat. Why—that was Sara Sue's!

He knew positively. He had chatted with Sara Sue a moment when she came in, and helped her take the coat off while T. J. Sanders was removing his own. Moreover, he had hung up Sara Sue's with especial care. He liked Sara Sue. He would be eternally grateful to her for favors rendered.

Whatever could Peaches Pomeroy be conniving?

Worthington remembered, all in a rush, that Peaches was a heel. She was snobbish. She had been Bob Towne's big moment last year, people said, and now Bob was crazy about Sara Sue Davis. He, himself, had heard Peaches make catty remarks, once or twice, about that. Now she had Sara Sue's coat—gosh!

To his amazement, Peaches began tearing at the lining of Sara Sue's coat.

On the side, near the hem, she was opening a seam, tearing at it with her fingers and her finger nails, and finally using her teeth to break the threads. And she was working very fast, almost frantically, keeping a sharp lookout. Worthington, highly curious, felt miserable lest she discover him in the shadows. A sense of alarm had suffused him.

Voices passing up the hall suddenly alarmed Peaches. Instantly she dropped the coat on a chair, forced a nice smile, and sauntered to the counter. She leaned over, looked left and right. Seeing no one, she was reassured. Her smile vanished. In a flash she was back at her task, working fast and warily. She reminded Worthington of a bird eating. A bird will spend one second picking up grass seed, then spend four seconds glancing cautiously around. In a half minute, though, she had the seam open—it appeared to be a slit three inches or so long—and she dropped the coat.

Then, surprisingly, Peaches reached for the diamond bracelet on her left arm.

It, too, offered some difficulty. Being extremely valuable (several thousand dollars, Worthington had heard) it had a positive safety catch on it. Peaches had to take her teeth to that, too. She gnawed, and twisted, and pulled, to get it free.

She pushed the pretty thing through the slit in Sara Sue's coat. Then she closed up the slit, making it as unobtrusive as she could. She hung the coat quickly on the rack where she had found it, took a deep breath, smiled again and calmly sauntered back outside to the front of the checking counter. She leaned one elbow indolently on it, as if waiting. Then she seemed to change her mind, for she walked down the hall and disappeared in the big ballroom.

"Gee-s-s-sh!" murmured Freshman Gurley, utterly appalled.

Anna Hahn Blonde Enigma Of Ohio's Crime History

COLUMBUS, Dec. 8—(UP)—Anna Marie Hahn was the blonde enigma of Ohio criminal history.

She was convicted of an atrocious crime—the poison murder of an old man. She was accused of several other similar murders. The prosecution said she killed for profit, contended that “there is not another person like her on the face of the earth.” Newspapers referred to her as a “blonde Borgin,” tabloids as “Arsenic Anna.”

Yet, criminologists could not classify her among the usual criminal types. She had a favorable family background. Her great love for her only child, Oscar, appeared to give her strength to bear up during the 16 months of her imprisonment. She was feminine in taste and action.

Confessions Refused

She never admitted the murders of which she was accused. Her stock claim of innocence usually was clinched with these words: “Do I look like the kind of person who would do a thing like that?”

Even hard-boiled policemen had to admit that she didn't look the part of a heartless murderess. For a 32 year old matron, she was not unattractive. Of plump, medium build, she had corn-colored hair worn in long, flowing bob. Her eyes were grey-blue, her features typically Teutonic.

Prison records showed that she was born July 7, 1906, the 12th child of Georg Filser, a Bavarian carpenter in the Alpine town of Fuessen, Germany.

She was raised in an atmosphere of extreme piety and modest culture. Her family was respected. The town was a famed center of Catholic learning. Such a crime as murder never was recorded there.

She was christened Anna Maria. She had a public school education and was taught the crafts of homemaking by her mother, who has kept faith in her even since her conviction.

Anna brought sorrow to her family when, as a girl of 20, she had an unfortunate love affair. She found she was going to have a baby. She would not name the father at the time but since has said he was a Viennese physician—a Dr. Max Matscheki who is now dead.

To U. S. in 1929

She was sent to Holland with a sister, later returned to Fuessen. She emigrated to America in 1929. After working two years as a domestic, she married Philip Hahn, a Cincinnati telegrapher.

Mrs. Hahn had few close friends. She liked to gamble on race horses. She befriended many elderly men and women, but had no intimate friends her own age. The prosecution charged in her trial that she did nice things for old folk only so that she could win their confidence and get their life savings.

Her attorneys described her as “an angel of mercy.” They said she enjoyed doing kind things for old people.

Her old friends were almost exclusively of the large Cincinnati German colony.

The insistence of a friend of Jacob Wagner, 78, that police investigate Wagner's mysterious death on June 3, 1937, started authorities working on what turned out to be a chain of horrible poison deaths.

Wagner's death certificate showed he had died of “heart disease.” But Fritz Grafmeyer, his friend, thought he had been poisoned. He went to police four times before he got action. Wagner's body was exhumed and a city chemist found traces of arsenic trioxide.

One after another, other mysterious deaths were investigated. At least seven showed strong evidence of poisoning.

The web of circumstantial evidence began entwining about Mrs. Hahn when she was arrested Aug. 10, 1937, at the request of Colorado Springs, Colo., authorities. They held a grand larceny warrant against her. She was accused of having stolen two rings from a Colorado Springs hotel proprietor.

With the request for her arrest came a picture of George Obendorfer, 67, taken after his death in Colorado Springs, and his fingerprints. Cincinnati police identified him as a Cincinnati cobbler. They learned he had gone to Colorado Springs with Mrs. Hahn and her son.

Lieut. George Schattler of the homicide squad chanced to be watching the police “line-up” when Mrs. Hahn was put through it.

“That's the woman we were investigating in that Wagner case,” he said.

Wagner's body had been exhumed on Aug. 1, the day that Obendorfer died in agony in a Colorado Springs hotel.

Mrs. Hahn, it was learned, had visited Wagner many times. She tried to withdraw $1000 from his bank account with a check she later admitted was forged. After his death, she presented a will in her own favor purportedly signed by Wagner on Jan. 5, 1936. The state charged during the trial that the will was forged.

96 Testify for State

Mrs. Hahn finally was indicted on charges of killing Wagner and George Gsellman, 67, a well-to-do German. She was tried in connection with Wagner's death, however.

The trial began Oct. 11, 1937, before Judge Charles S. Bell. The state called 96 witnesses; the de-they did not have ample time to prepare her defense.

The Hahn lawyers charged that during the trial, the state erroneously was permitted to bring in matter which had not even been hinted at either in the indictment or in the bill. In addition, they charged that the state should not have been permitted to introduce evidence concerning Mrs. Hahn's relations with other men, since she was on trial only for the murder of Wagner.

After all the courts had rejected her appeal, Dec. 7 was set as the date for her execution. Governor Martin L. Davey remained her last hope of sparing her life. She believed firmly that he would save her.

She had said in interviews that she was not afraid to die but feared that death in the electric chair would be a stain on the life of her son. She wanted Oscar to get a good education and to grow into a useful citizen. She said she never wanted him to return to Germany because of Hitler.

Disposal Plant to Need Technical Supervision

Technical supervision will be needed at the new municipal disposal plant until regularly employed chemist—superintendent and operators become acquainted with the operation of the plant and are qualified under regulations of the state Department of Health, council was informed Wednesday night.

Carl C. Leist, solicitor, said he and Floyd G. Browne, the city's engineer on the project, and the Civil Service Commission had discussed the employee question with the state department.

Mr. Leist informed council the chemist-superintendent must eventually have a class “A” qualification under regulations established by the department. The Circleville plant is rated a class “A” plant by the department. Mr. Leist said the position requires training both as an engineer and chemist. He was informed the chemist-superintendent after being certified by the Civil Service Commission can receive training to qualify under the rating set by the state department. Mr. Browne will supervise the plant operation, councilmen were told, at $50 a month until the chemist-superintendent qualifies to take full charge. Operators will be listed under a class “C” rating.

Ever Wonder Why You're Constipated?

Do you ever have days when you just have to drag yourself along, when you feel tired, sunk—because of that constipation? Then why not find out the real cause of your trouble?

What have you had to eat lately? Just things like meat, bread and potatoes? If that's it, you may not have to look any farther. It's likely your trouble is you don't get enough “bulk.” And “bulk” doesn't mean a lot of food. It means a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft “bulky” mass in the intestines and aids elimination.

If “bulk” is what you lack, your ticket is a dish of crisp crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast every day. It contains the “bulk” you need plus Nature's great intestinal tonic, vitamin B.

Eat it every day, drink plenty of water, and join the “regulars”! Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Ever Wonder Why You're Constipated?

Do you ever have days when you just have to drag yourself along, when you feel tired, sunk—because of that constipation? Then why not find out the real cause of your trouble?

What have you had to eat lately? Just things like meat, bread and potatoes? If that's it, you may not have to look any farther. It's likely your trouble is you don't get enough “bulk.” And “bulk” doesn't mean a lot of food. It means a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft “bulky” mass in the intestines and aids elimination.

If “bulk” is what you lack, your ticket is a dish of crisp crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast every day. It contains the “bulk” you need plus Nature's great intestinal tonic, vitamin B.

Eat it every day, drink plenty of water, and join the “regulars.” Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Disposal Plant to Need Technical Supervision

Technical supervision will be needed at the new municipal disposal plant until regularly employed chemist—superintendent and operators become acquainted with the operation of the plant and are qualified under regulations of the state Department of Health, council was informed Wednesday night.

Carl C. Leist, solicitor, said he and Floyd G. Browne, the city's engineer on the project, and the Civil Service Commission had discussed the employe question with the state department.

Mr. Leist informed council the chemist-superintendent must eventually have a class “A” qualification under regulations established by the department. The Circleville plant is rated a class “A” plant by the department. Mr. Leist said the position requires training both as an engineer and chemist. He was informed the chemist-superintendent after being certified by the Civil Service Commission can receive training to qualify under the rating set by the state department. Mr. Browne will supervise the plant operation, councilmen were told, at $50 a month until the chemist-superintendent qualifies to take full charge. Operators will be listed under a class “C” rating.

BILL TERRY'S ACTIVITY REMAINS IN CENTER OF BASEBALL STAGE

GIANT MANAGER AFTER BONURA OF WASHINGTON

Detroit Holding Up Big Deal; Many Clubs Announce Changes

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 8—(UP)—Bill Terry, manager of the New York Giants, was reported today to have closed a deal with the Washington Senators for First Baseman Zeke Bonura as major league ivory hunters again stole the spotlight from the 37th annual minor league convention.

Six American league clubs, it was said, have turned down the $7,500 waiver price on the 30 year old Senator star. With Detroit holding up the deal which would send Zeke to New York, Terry, it was understood, opened negotiations with Washington when Brooklyn refused to give him First Baseman Buddy Hassett for Catcher Ken O'Dea, whom he secured in the six-player swap with Chicago on Tuesday.

It was believed Terry would wait until the major league meeting in New York next week before calling for a showdown on Bonura.

Bees in Market

If this deal goes through, it was believed that the Dodgers, who have Dolph Camilli as a first-stringer, would send Hassett to another club. The Boston Bees were seen as the best customers and if they took Hassett they'd probably send Elbert Fletcher to Pittsburgh.

Among the rumors today were that:

- 1. The Chicago White Sox have offered Outfielder Ripper Radcliff to the Yankees for George Selkirk; 2. The Detroit Tigers don't expect to make any deals until the major league meetings open in New York but they would like to send Outfielder Chet Laabs to the Chicago White Sox for Outfielder Larry Roesenthal; 3. that Russ Van Atta, former Yankee pitcher, may leave the St. Louis Browns for the White Sox in return for Infielder Boze Berger.

Trades made in the last 24 hours:

The Giants released Utility Infielder Mickey Haslin to San Diego in exchange for Pitcher Manuel Salvo; the Philadelphia Phillies sold First Baseman Phil Weintraub to Minneapolis; Boston's Bees sold Utility Player Bobby Reis to St. Paul; Chattanooga purchased First Baseman Roy Mort and Pitcher Stewart Bolen from Hollywood and Outfielder Ab Wright from Montreal; the Chicago White Sox sent on option to Shreveport. Players Jesse Landrum, John Gerlach and Gene Ford; Homer Peck, former Toledo outfielder, signed as player-manager with Shreveport; Greenville, S. C., signed Alex McColl as manager; Chattanooga purchased Catcher Jim Galvin from Minneapolis, obtained Infielders Edwin Taylor and Edwin Vandergrift from the Boston Bees, and brought Catchers Henry Camilli and Jim Galvin from the Minneapolis Millers.

Amendments Studied

The minor league delegates were to continue their discussions today on 35 constitutional amendments, chief of which will affect the major-minor laws concerning young players.

St. Louis Fans Unable to See Cards As Contenders in National Contest

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 8—(UP)—Manager Ray Blades to the contrary, baseball followers here believe that unless the owners of the St. Louis Cardinals do some fast and furious trading this winter in addition to digging deeply into club coffers, the one-time Gas House Gang will suffer its worst season in two decades in the 1939 campaign.

Although the appointment of Blades, which evoked surprisingly little comment from fans, should solve at least the problem of friction between Branch Rickey and his manager, supporters of the club view the Cards' prospects pessimistically to say the least.

As the roster stood at the end of last season the former Gas House Gang had only two outstanding players—Joe (The Duck) Medwick and Johnny Mize. The rest, with the exception of the pitching staff, were either mediocre veterans or relatively "promising" rookies.

Rickey's Trades Discounted

Rickey, vice president and the active boss of the Cards, said he is dicker with two major league clubs for important trades which he averred would bolster the Red

CANADIAN MAY WIN TITLE AS BEST '38 RIDER

NEW YORK, Dec. 8—(UP)—Johnny Longden, a 28 year old rider from Calgary, Canada, looks like the champion jockey of 1938.

With only nine days left to ride at Tanforan, Calif., Longden today was 19 winners ahead of his nearest rival, Johnny Adams, who topped the field last year. Longden has had 218 winners in 1062 races; Adams, 199 in 1048.

Longden, who finished 12th last year, and Adams have been staging a nip and tuck duel on the West Coast track for the last two weeks.

The race might have been even closer if Adams hadn't suffered a fractured leg during the Summer when he was on top. Since returning to the tracks, the 23 year old Iola, Kansas, rider has tried hard to overhaul Longden but his chances now are very slim, unless Longden should be forced out during the next few days.

JOHNNY UNDER KNIFE

CINCINNATI, Dec. 8—(UP)—Johnny Vander Meer, Cincinnati pitching star rested "thoroughly at ease" today in a hospital after his third operation for tonsil removal. His physician said any chance of "tonsil trouble" affecting his hurling was "definitely" eliminated.

Birds. Cardinal fans, however, immediately classed that statement with the statement Rickey made at the start of last season—that the club was the best in the club's history. It finished sixth.

The Cardinals' offensive next season is expected to be built around Medwick and Mize, but the effectiveness of this pair of stellar batsmen in any future campaign is open to speculation.

Although Medwick led the league in batting in 1937, he was in a slump virtually all through the Summer which left him completely out of the running for batting honors in 1938. Whether he can stage a comeback is a question that will not be determined until next Summer.

Mize staged a spectacular hitting spree toward the end of the 1938 campaign that made him runner-up in National League batting for the second successive year. His showing for the first three months of the season, however, was exceedingly poor. This was ascribed to an excess of avoirdupois and Mize can be expected to pay considerable attention this winter to his physical condition. His fielding, however, has never been outstanding, a fact that detracts from his value.

Pitching Prospects Gloomy

As to moundsmen, the Cards' prospects are particularly on the dark side. Lon Warneke the club's chief mainstay last season, possibly may begin to fade with age or overwork. Curt Davis is good but not outstanding. Bob Weiland is a good workhorse but not spectacular. Paul Dean, although he showed promise in his comeback at the end of last Summer, is still an unknown quantity. Bill McGee, who had bad luck in his first season in the big time, should show

NEW YORK, Dec. 8—(UP)—Carnegie Tech was presented with the August V. Lambert memorial trophy, symbolic of eastern college gridiron supremacy, during a dinner last night on the World's Fairgrounds. Pittsburgh, which Carnegie upset this season, won the award in 1936 and '37.

TOLES FAVORED TO WIN BATTLE WITH BARLUND

NEW YORK, Dec. 8—(UP)—Roscoe Toles, hard-hitting Detroit Negro heavyweight, was a 6-5 favorite today to defeat Gunnar Barlund of Finland in their 10-round "redemption fight" tomorrow night at the Hippodrome.

A few months ago, this bout would have drawn a big gate at Madison Square Garden because both were considered such tough customers that none of the top-flight heavyweights would meet them.

But they're fighting 10 rounds at the "Hip" instead of 15 at the Garden because each lost to easy opponents in their last trips through the ropes. Barlund was upset by young Lou Nova of Alameda, Calif., and Toles was surprised by Willie Reddick, Philadelphia Negro.

Thus tomorrow's brawl will be a "redemption" affair, for both are trying to get back into the big time picture. Toles is favored because of his punching ability and because of Barlund's tendency to cut easily.

CAGE LOOP MAY BE ORGANIZED IN CIRCLEVILLE

Meetings To Be Conducted Friday Evening At Athletic Club

Circleville may have an independent basketball league this winter, performing in the Circleville Athletic Club gymnasium, if plans of several industrial firms are carried out. A meeting has been called for 8 p. m. Friday in the Athletic Club rooms with all interested persons invited to attend.

Roy N. Beaty, president of the C. A. C., said Thursday that several persons had conferred with him about organization and about using the Athletic Club court. "I think Friday's meeting may result in an organization," Beaty said. Games would be played on Thursday evenings.

Pickaway Tilt Watched

The Darbyville at Pickaway township cage game, scheduled Friday evening, may go a long way toward determining the county league title. Muhlenberg is resting on the top rung right now, tied with Ashville. A victory over Pickaway would mean much to the lads from Darbyville.

Pickaway has lost one joust, that to New Holland, which team was an easy victim for the Darbyville boys.

Snapper Ankrom is Darbyville's big gun, while George Wilson is the center of the Pickaway offense.

Ashville should win its game from Walnut this week to remain in its top position. Other games send Washington to Williamsport, Monroe to Darby, Scioto to Perry and Saltcreek to New Holland.

Tigers Working Hard

A hard scrimmage, with three full teams getting plenty of action, had the Circleville Tigers ready Thursday for the invasion of Holy Rosary from Columbus, scheduled for Friday evening. The Athletic Club gym will be used for the contest, which will follow a reserve game which begins at 7:30. Schwartz, of Columbus, will referee.

Coach Roy Black has decided to start Heffner and Davis at forwards, Walters at center, and Bumgarner and Smith at guards. Early replacements will probably be Staley, Bowsher and Hughes, the latter reporting this week.

Rosary's strength is centered about Tommy Ucker, captain, who plays guard and forward with equal ability.

Many Record Holders Meet in Title Game

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—(UP)—All but two of the National Professional football league's individual champions will be seen in action here Sunday when the Green Bay Packers, seeking their fifth championship, battle the New York Giants for the 1938 title.

Final averages show these teams had three winners in a campaign which saw three records set and two tied. All five 1937 titleholders were displaced.

Ed Danowski of the Giants created a record by completing 70 passes out of 129 tossed for a total gain of 848 yards and an efficiency average of .542. Danowski, who dethroned Sammy Baugh of Washington, thus beat his own 1935 record by 38 points. He also raised the life-time passing efficiency mark from .483 to .498 totaling 255 completions out of 512 passes in five seasons. Jack Robbins, of the Chicago Cardinals, was second best passer this year, completing 52 out of 97 for a .536 mark.

The third record was created by Doug Russell, Chicago Cardinals, who threw a pass to Gaynell Tinsley good for a gain of 98 yards. The former long-distance mark was 95 yards, Pat Coffee to Tinsley, in 1937.

Don Hutson, Green Bay end, equalled his own record for most touchdowns, with nine. Tinsley, with 41 passes caught, equalled Hutson's 1937 record. Hutson finished second with 32.

"Whizzer" White of Pittsburgh, former Colorado star making his pro debut, was the leading ground gainer, displacing Cliff Battles who left the Washington Redskins to take a job as assistant coach at Columbia. White gained 567 yards in 152 attempts for an average of 3.7.

Ward Cuff of the Giants and Ralph Kercheval, Brooklyn, tied in field goals with five each. Cuff had a better average, however, completing five out of nine tried against five out of 13 for his Dodge rival.

Clark Hinkle of Green Bay replaced Jack Manders of the Chicago Bears as the leading scorer. He made seven touchdowns, seven conversions and three field goals for a total of 58 points. Hutson, with nine touchdowns and three conversions, was second with 57 points.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—(UP)—Johnny Longden, a 28 year old rider from Calgary, Canada, looks like the champion jockey of 1938.

With only nine days left to ride at Tanforan, Calif., Longden today was 19 winners ahead of his nearest rival, Johnny Adams, who topped the field last year. Longden has had 218 winners in 1062 races; Adams, 199 in 1048.

Longden, who finished 12th last year, and Adams have been staging a nip and tuck duel on the West Coast track for the last two weeks.

The race might have been even closer if Adams hadn't suffered a fractured leg during the Summer when he was on top. Since returning to the tracks, the 23 year old Iola, Kansas, rider has tried hard to overhaul Longden but his chances now are very slim, unless Longden should be forced out during the next few days.

JOHNNY UNDER KNIFE

CINCINNATI, Dec. 8.—(UP)—Johnny Vander Meer, Cincinnati pitching star rested "thoroughly at ease" today in a hospital after his third operation for tonsil removal. His physician said any chance of "tonsil trouble" affecting his hurling was "definitely" eliminated.

CAGE LOOP MAY BE ORGANIZED IN CIRCLEVILLE

Meetings To Be Conducted Friday Evening At Athletic Club

Circleville may have an independent basketball league this Winter, performing in the Circleville Athletic Club gymnasium, if plans of several industrial firms are carried out. A meeting has been called for 8 p. m. Friday in the Athletic Club rooms with all interested persons invited to attend.

Roy N. Beatty, president of the C. A. C., said Thursday that several persons had conferred with him about organization and about using the Athletic Club court. "I think Friday's meeting may result in an organization," Beatty said. Games would be played on Thursday evenings.

Pickaway Tilt Watched

The Darbyville at Pickaway township cage game, scheduled Friday evening, may go a long way toward determining the county league title. Muhlenberg is resting on the top rung right now, tied with Ashville. A victory over Pickaway would mean much to the lads from Darbyville.

Pickaway has lost one joust, that to New Holland, which team was an easy victim for the Darbyville boys.

Snapper Ankrom is Darbyville's big gun, while George Wilson is the center of the Pickaway offensive.

Ashville should win its game from Walnut this week to remain in its top position. Other games send Washington to Williamsport, Monroe to Darby, Scioto to Perry and Salt Creek to New Holland.

Tigers Working Hard

A hard scrimmage, with three full teams getting plenty of action, had the Circleville Tigers ready Thursday for the invasion of Holy Rosary from Columbus, scheduled for Friday evening. The Athletic Club gym will be used for the contest, which will follow a reverse game which begins at 7:30. Schwartz, of Columbus, will referee.

Coach Roy Black has decided to start Heffner and Davis at forwards, Walters at center, and Bumgarner and Smith at guards. Early replacements will probably be Staley, Bowsher and Hughes, the latter reporting this week.

Rosary's strength is centered about Tommy Ucker, captain, who plays guard and forward with equal ability.

Many Record Holders Meet in Title Game

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—(UP)—All but two of the National Professional football league's individual champions will be seen in action here Sunday when the Green Bay Packers, seeking their fifth championship, battle the New York Giants for the 1938 title.

Final averages show these teams had three winners in a campaign which saw three records set and two tied. All five 1937 titleholders were displaced.

Ed Danowski of the Giants created a record by completing 70 passes out of 129 tossed for a total gain of 848 yards and an efficiency average of .542. Danowski, who dethroned Sammy Baugh of Washington, thus beat his own 1935 record by 38 points. He also raised the life-time passing efficiency mark from .483 to .498 totaling 255 completions out of 512 passes in five seasons. Jack Robbins, of the Chicago Cardinals, was second best passer this year, completing 52 out of 97 for a .536 mark.

The third record was created by Doug Russell, Chicago Cardinals, who threw a pass to Gaynell Tinsley good for a gain of 98 yards. The former long-distance mark was 95 yards, Pat Coffee to Tinsley, in 1937.

Don Hutson, Green Bay end, equalled his own record for most touchdowns, with nine. Tinsley, with 41 passes caught, equalled Hutson's 1937 record. Hutson finished second with 32.

"Whizzer" White of Pittsburgh, former Colorado star making his pro debut, was the leading ground gainer, displacing Cliff Battles who left the Washington Redskins to take a job as assistant coach at Columbia. White gained 567 yards in 152 attempts for an average of 3.7.

Ward Cuff of the Giants and Ralph Kercival, Brooklyn, tied in field goals with five each. Cuff had a better average, however, completing five out of nine tried against five out of 13 for his Dodge rival.

Clark Hinkle of Green Bay replaced Jack Manders of the Chicago Bears as the leading scorer. He made seven touchdowns, seven conversions and three field goals for a total of 58 points. Hutson, with nine touchdowns and three conversions, was second with 57 points.

SCIENTIST SEES SECOND ICE AGE ENGULFING U.S.

Vegetation Change Cited To Show Weather Is Growing Colder

OBERLIN, O., Dec. 8—(UP)—Dr. Paul B. Sears, professor of botany in Oberlin College, reveals the past and predicts the future from pollen in mud from the bottom of northern Ohio bogs—mud sometimes still cold from the ice of 10,000 years ago.

With a special tube which the doctor designed himself, specimens of the mud are taken from depths ranging to 40 feet.

"Going down a foot is, roughly speaking, going back 300 years," Dr. Sears said. "We strike bottom at between 35 and 40 feet usually. That means going back 10,000 to 12,000 years—when the great glaciers retreated from the Great Lakes region."

The mud contains pollen which fell to the bottom of Lake Erie from nearby vegetation. For thousands of years the bottom of the lake built up, until today, where the scientist takes his samples, there no longer is a lake—only a greyish-brown bog.

Notes Climates Changing

"My findings indicate that the climate here gradually is changing toward a colder, moister atmosphere, which eventually may lead to another ice age," Sears said. "We once believed that the great glaciers retreated from 100,000 to 150,000 years ago, but now we know that their retreat was much more recent."

The pollen is embalmed in the mud, and by examining it under a microscope it is possible to determine just what type of vegetation grew upon the shores of the lakes. From the type of vegetation the nature of the climate is indicated.

Dr. Sears, working with his peat sampler at Camden Lake near here, pulled up a tube of gray marl from the bottom of the bog—mud 10,000 years old and perfectly preserved. He touched the soft, smooth material.

"It's very cold," he said, "It probably hasn't warmed up in 10,000 years—it might still be cold from that ancient ice."

The oldest forest whose pollen is found at the bottom of the bogs studied is that of spruce and fir.

Trees Reflect Changes

"Now there's not a remnant of native spruce within 75 miles," Dr. Sears said. "The climate here once was like that of eastern Canada."

"Later came scrub oaks, hickories, and grasses, indicating that Ohio once was a prairie land, and it probably was not so long ago. Two or three thousand years ago it was much warmer here, and even when the white man came there still were buffalo in what is now Ohio."

According to Dr. Sears, the present conditions here may be but a recess between ice ages.

"The pattern of climatic changes in this region since the last glacial age is quite similar to that of previous interglacials between ice ages," he said. "We may be enjoying but a brief respite, geologically speaking, before the ice again descends on the land."

MANY MODELS EXHIBITED OF PREHISTORIC ANIMALS

PHILADELPHIA (UP) — The recently opened "Hall of Earth History" at the Academy of Natural Sciences here is believed to contain the most complete set of prehistoric animal models ever assembled.

About 50 percent of the models are the work of Eda Kassel, young sculptor. She is proudest of her 5-foot reproduction of a Brachiosaurus—the first ever made in which she reconstructed from a German museum of bones of the animal that lived 150,000,000 years ago.

dants still live in mixed strains among the Mexican population of Presidio.

Bones of an infant, shell beads, cloud blowers, prepared sections of pigment, and pottery shreds are among the artifacts already uncovered in the pithouses—prehistoric lodges partly underground and roofed with beams and earth.

The houses probably were dug with pointed sticks and flat stones and the earth carried away in baskets. Stone axes were used in cutting the timbers.

Broadcast To Air Appeal For Funds To Fight Tuberculosis

Receipts from Christmas Seals for the first ten days of the campaign total $462.82 from 646 letters. Officials in charge of the sale said the prompt response of the public shows the community appreciates the importance of the work being conducted in the country.

The seal sale is unique in that it gives everyone, regardless of their means, an opportunity to contribute to the campaign to build a defense against tuberculosis. Persons wishing to purchase seals may obtain them from Miss Elizabeth Dunlap, Mrs. George Crites or Mrs. Howard Stevenson.

Treatment Provided

There are 27 special and other hospitals in Ohio providing over 5,000 beds for the treatment of tuberculosis. These include one federal, one state, three district, 13 county, two municipal, five private sanatoria and two preventoria. Of the total beds, 993 are in various state institutions.

The A cappella choir of the University of Pennsylvania will participate in a special broadcast, featuring annual Christmas Seal sale of the National Tuberculosis association, over a coast-to-coast network of the Columbia broadcasting system on Saturday, Dec. 10, from 4:30 to 5 p. m. The chorus is made up of 200 voices under the direction of Dr. Earl McDonald and is under contract with the Philadelphia Symphony orchestra for a series of concerts. Dr. Charles J. Hatfield, former managing director of the National Tuberculosis association, and now associate director and chairman of the board of the Henry Phipps Institute at Philadelphia, will give a five-minute talk on the program.

Council Talks Need for Stop Street Ruling

An ordinance establishing stop streets in Circleville was ordered Wednesday night by council.

Carl C. Leist, solicitor, was instructed to work with Police Chief William McCrady in preparing the legislation for a future meeting. The stop street question was introduced in council by Councilman William Reid. "I believe we should have an ordinance designating

LODGE INQUIRES ABOUT BUYING TRAFFIC LIGHTS

A. L. Wilder, representing the B. P. O. Elks lodge, met with council Wednesday evening to learn what steps had been taken for the installation of traffic lights on Court street at Mill and Corwin streets for the protection of school children.

The lodge appropriated $100 for one light under a national safety program being conducted throughout the nation. Mr. Wilder said

"stop streets," he said. Mr. Reid asked the police chief to make a few remarks.

"Circleville has only two through streets, Main and Court streets," the police chief said. The officer recalled the accident at Mingo and Franklin streets, Saturday night, in which a Laurelville resident was fatally injured. He explained that neither street was designed as a stop street.

"On accidents we (the police) don't know which car is in the right or wrong," the chief said.

TWO ORDINANCES PROVIDE FUNDS FOR CITY WORK

Two ordinances appropriating funds for the balance of the year to various departments were passed by council, Wednesday, under suspension of rules.

One ordinance, requested by Karl J. Herrmann, safety director, appropriated $200 for hospital services and $100 for physicians in the relief funds.

The second ordinance, requested by Miss Lillian Young, city auditor, included appropriations of $1,800 for street repairs and $150 for materials from the gasoline tax fund, $43.73 for the clerk's salary and $35 for medical supplies in the board of health fund, $100 for the police department for incidentals, and $50 to the auditor's fund for incidentals.

A resolution approving the recent action of the budget commission in establishing rates for 1939 was adopted. The city's rate is $14.60 per $1,000 real estate valuation, the same as this year.

the club hoped to report on its safety project by Dec. 1.

Mr. Wilder was informed that prices on lights were being checked and the city expects to purchase the second light. They will cost about $100 each.

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA

WHEN a couple of imaginative adolescents set out to find a husband for a girl's mother, anything can happen and does in "Listen, Darling," which is a story embracing just that situation. It opens Friday at the Cliftona Theatre.

Featuring Freddie Bartholomew and Judy Garland with Mary Astor as the mother whose romance they attempt to guide, it is a gem of adolescent nonsense with laughs galore, interrupted only by choice serious bits that provide relief with pathos and effective tugs at the heart strings.

Alan Hale, Walter Pidgeon and Gene Lockhart form the trio of would-be suitors who fall victim to the plans of Freddie and Judy and what they go through is plenty.

AT THE GRAND

That black eye that Jane Withers wears in one of the scenes of "Keep Smiling," her new picture for 20th Century-Fox wasn't just painted on.

The script called for a rough-and-tumble fight among the members of Jane's boarding school dramatics class. The exuberant young star, always eager to give everything she's got, waded into the melee in earnest, with the resulting "shiner" her share of the general casualties.

Director Herbert I. Leeds thought it gave the picture a nice realistic touch, and had the make-up man "beautify" it slightly for the ensuing sequence.

"Keep Smiling" closes tonight at the Grand Theatre, with Gloria Stuart and Henry Wilcoxon featured in a splendid cast that includes Helen Westley, Jed Prouty, Douglas Fowley and Robert Allen.

AT THE CIRCLE

A comedy-drama of race tracks and counterfeiting dens, called "Torchy Gets Her Man" and starring Glenda Farrell and Barton
